(54) Title: APPARATUS AND METHOD FOR ROUTING COMMUNICATIONS

(57) Abstract

A mobile telephone (1) is provided with a look-up table (1000) enabling the mobile telephone to select preferred routes for connecting outgoing calls on the basis of predetermined codes which populate the look-up table. When operating in a cellular communications network a communications channel may thereby be selected from a plurality of available channels and ongoing transmission of an outgoing call may be routed via further networks selected in accordance with the route codes. The look-up table may be stored in a SIM card of the mobile telephone and may be updated via transmission of data from a remote control centre via a cellular network or via a docking station (1300) to which the mobile telephone is releasably connectable. When the call is routed via a packet switching network, the routing code may comprise a string of network node addresses.

INTERNATIONAL SEARCH REPORT

International application No.
PCT/GB 00/00114

Box I Observations where certain claims were found unsearchable (Continuation of item 1 of first sheet)

This International Search Report has not been established in respect of certain claims under Article 17(2)(a) for the following reasons:

1. ☐ Claims Nos.:
because they relate to subject matter not required to be searched by this Authority, namely:
2. ☐ Claims Nos.:
because they relate to parts of the International Application that do not comply with the prescribed requirements to such an extent that no meaningful International Search can be carried out, specifically:
3. ☐ Claims Nos.:
because they are dependent claims and are not drafted in accordance with the second and third sentences of Rule 6.4(a).

Box II Observations where unity of invention is lacking (Continuation of item 2 of first sheet)

This International Searching Authority found multiple inventions in this international application, as follows:

see additional sheet

1. ☒ As all required additional search fees were timely paid by the applicant, this International Search Report covers all searchable claims.
2. ☐ As all searchable claims could be searched without effort justifying an additional fee, this Authority did not invite payment of any additional fee.
3. ☐ As only some of the required additional search fees were timely paid by the applicant, this International Search Report covers only those claims for which fees were paid, specifically claims Nos.:
4. ☐ No required additional search fees were timely paid by the applicant. Consequently, this International Search Report is restricted to the invention first mentioned in the claims; it is covered by claims Nos.:

Remark on Protest

- ☐ The additional search fees were accompanied by the applicant's protest.
- ☒ No protest accompanied the payment of additional search fees.

The following defects in the form or contents of the international application have been noted:

INTERNATIONAL PRELIMINARY
EXAMINATION REPORT - SEPARATE SHEET

International application No. PCT/GB00/00114

The following documents (D) are referred to in this report

D1: EP-A-0 724 371 (Cable & Wireless)

D2: US-A-5 764 741 (Barak)

D3: FR-A-2 763 462 (Motorola)

D4: US-A-5 515 425 (Penzias et al.)

Concerning section III (no opinion due to lack of clarity).

Claim 86 which is directed to "instructions", claim 87 which defines a signal comprising such instructions and claim 88 which defines a signal comprising route selection information are not clear as they actually do not define any technical features of the matter for which protection is sought, contrary to Article 6 PCT. In addition, the category (either method/use or apparatus/system) of the claims is also not clear. Hence, no meaningful examination of these claims is at present possible.

Concerning section V.2 (reasoned statement under Article 35(2) PCT)

The cited document D1 already discloses, in accordance with the essential features of present claim 1, a method of operating a mobile telephone in a cellular communications network, wherein the mobile telephone (handset) is provided with a look-up table enabling the mobile telephone to select preferred routes for connecting outgoing calls on the basis of predetermined, programmed "user preferences" and/or tariff information contained in the look-up table, see the "Outgoing Call Mode" described at pages 3 and 4. Thus, the method of D1 permits to establish an outgoing call by selecting a channel of a given network (service provider) from a plurality of available communications channels based at least in part on the call destination information input by the user and preferences/information stored in the look-up table, cf. also claims 4 and 6 in D1.

Said prior art method differs from the subject-matter of claim 1 only in that the latter defines the use of "preferred route codes", which are not explicitly to be found in citation D1. However, as mentioned above, D1 makes use of "user preferences" and "tariff information" which can actually be regarded as such "route codes", as they are also used to select a preferred communications channel.

As a consequence, no real difference that could justify an inventive step can presently be seen in claim 1, which hence lacks an inventive step of its subject-matter

---

International application No. PCT/GB00/00114

in accordance with Article 33(3) PCT.

A similar reasoning equally applies vis-a-vis the cited reference D2, which also discloses a least cost routing method to be used e.g. in a cellular telephone, see col.3, lines 12 - 13, and wherein the "best" service provider and an "optimum" route are selected for each outgoing telephone call based on information stored in a database, see col.3, line 65 to col.4, line 65 and col.6, lines 15 to 42. Claim 1, therefore, lacks the required inventive step, Article 33(3) PCT, over the disclosure of D2.

Independent claim 48 is drafted in structural terms rather than in terms of method steps and corresponds in essence to claim 1; hence the arguments concerning lack of inventive step set out above apply mutatis mutandis equally to said claim 48.

Similar considerations also apply to independent claim 83 which relates to a portable storage medium for storing look-up tables containing "preferred route codes" of the type discussed above, cf. e.g. D1, page 4, lines 8 and 9, and to independent claim 89, which relates to a method of routing a telephone call by adding a prefix code to a user generated call information in order to define a preferred route, cf. in particular claim 1 in D2.

Thus, independent claims 48, 83 and 89 do not meet the requirements of Article 33(3) PCT.

The dependent claims 2 to 29, 40 to 47, 49 to 69, 72 to 77, 84 and 85 appear to add nothing of inventive significance to claims 1 and 48, respectively, as the additional features introduced by said dependent claims refer only to minor implementing details which are known or directly derivable from the cited prior art references or fall within the general knowledge or technical competence of a person skilled in the art.

In particular, the features set out in dependent method claims 2 to 9 and corresponding apparatus claims 49 to 51 concerning the "best" route/channel selection are already to be found (at least implicitly) in the cited D1/D2, see passages noted above.

The features of claims 10 to 12 and 52 to 54 concerning the network registration procedure obviously fall within the normal technical competence of a skilled person and are in addition to be taken from citation D3, cf. page 11, line 15 to page 15, line 18.

The features of claims 13 to 22, 55 to 63 and 84 concerning the storage of the look-up tables are known from D1, wherein a portable medium, such as SIM cards, are used.

The features of claims 23 and 64 concerning the use of default routing data are already disclosed in the cited document D4, cf. col.4, lines 14 to 19. >

The features of claims 24 to 27 and 65 to 67 concerning the transmission of updating information to the mobile telephone e.g. by means of SMS messages, is taught by D1 and D2.

The features set out in the remaining dependent claims appear to be merely generally known features each acting in a normal and unsurprising way, and not combining to yield any unexpected or surprising advantageous result or to be common design measures within the range of options envisaged by a skilled person, e.g. the use of the WAP protocol for transferring updating information to the mobile telephone as defined in claims 28, 29 and 68, 69, the structure of the data stored in the look-up tables as defined in claims 40 to 47 and 72 to 77 or the provision of a computer program as per claim 85.

Independent claim 78 which defines a docking station permitting to transfer updating information to a mobile telephone connected thereto is neither taught, nor rendered obvious, alone or in combination, by any of the prior art documents cited in the International Search Report. Claim 78 is therefore novel and considered to involve the required inventive step, Articles 33(2) and (3) PCT.

Dependent claims 79 to 82 relate to further implementing details of the docking station defined by claim 78 to which they refer and are thus equally novel, inventive.

Similarly, the features set out in claims 30 to 39, 70 and 71 also concerning the provision of a docking station are neither known from, nor rendered obvious by, the available prior art. The subject-matter of said claims 30 to 39, 70 and 71 is thus novel, inventive.

All claims are industrially applicable, Article 33(4) PCT.

Concerning section VII (form and contents).

The independent claims are not drafted in the proper two-part "characterised" form recommended by Rule 6.3.(b),(i),(ii) PCT, having a preamble that correctly reflects the nearest prior art represented by the above noted D1.

The requirements of Rule 5.1.(a),(ii) PCT are not met, as the relevant prior art document D1 has not been acknowledged by reference and discussed in the introductory part of the description.

The claims do not include reference signs in parentheses where features shown in the drawings are referred to, Rule 6.2.(b) PCT.

because they are dependent claims and are not drafted in accordance with the second and third sentences of Rule 6.4(a).

Box II Observations where unity of invention is lacking (Continuation of item 2 of first sheet)

This International Searching Authority found multiple inventions in this international application, as follows:

see additional sheet

1. ☒ As all required additional search fees were timely paid by the applicant, this International Search Report covers all searchable claims.
